Águila Real

The Águila Real, or Golden Eagle, is North America's largest bird of prey and the national bird of Mexico. Originally found in over half of Mexico, the Águila Real was added to the endangered species list in 1994, its habitat having been lost to population growth, mining activities, accidental poisoning, and illegal hunting. Today, only about 100 couples have been estimated to remain.

Mexico is home to some of the world's most awesome eco-treasures. From the Meso-American Barrier Reef to the majestic Popocatepetl and Iztaccihuatl volcanoes near Puebla, to the crystal clear cenotes and underground rivers of the Yucatan and the stunning scenery of Copper Canyon's Barrancas del Cobre, Mexico has a wealth of natural wonders. We are proud to join EarthX in the effort to educate, inform and inspire people to action across all borders for a sustainable future for both our beautiful country and our entire world.

How the Mexico Pavilion at Earthx2019 came to be.

Trammell S. Crow joined forces with Mexican environmental activist Juan Carlos Izquierdo and a group of dreamers to bring EarthX to Mexico City in November 2018 at the Casa del Lago in Chapultepec Park. This successful expansion into Mexico has directly resulted in 2019's special EarthxMexico Pavilion here at our Dallas event. The curated selection of speakers and exhibitors provides insight into our Southern neighbors' own environmental challenges and solutions, as well as those we share. Texas' privileged relationship with Mexico, sharing not only a border but a history, makes it the perfect stage for this collaboration. It's about building bridges not barriers, a way for us to welcome those with a common commitment to making a more sustainable world. Let's hope this is just the start to ongoing dialogues.

The River and The Wall

99 Minutes

Screening: Hall of State Saturday 4/27 2:00 pm
 Director: Ben Masters

In his last feature-length film, Unbranded, Ben Masters set out to cross America on wild mustangs in an unforgettable journey across public lands. In his latest film, he sets out with an equally audacious and challenging plan: to navigate 1,200 miles of the border between the USA and Mexico on horses, mountain bikes and canoes. While everything the native Texan does involves some sort of adventure, his real purpose in The River and the Wall is to explore the wildlife across this complex and diverse terrain and understand how it would be affected by the wall proposed by President Donald Trump. The film provides a different layer to the debate raging from Washington, D.C. to El Paso and beyond as Masters paddles, pedals and rides his way through this thorny issue.

101 Minutes

Sea of Shadows

Screening: Hall of State Saturday 4/28 2:45 pm
 Director: Richard Ladkani

Mexico's Sea of Cortez is under attack. Thousands of nets drift down, walls of death meant to snare the totoaba — whose bladder fetches huge sums of money on the Chinese black market. But the bycatch extends to all forms of marine life, including the earth's smallest whale, the vaquita, a rare creature endemic to the Sea of Cortez whose population has been fished to fewer than 30 individuals. Despite government shutdowns of fishing and public awareness campaigns, market forces continue to drive the activity, the lure of big payouts attracting even shadowy cartel involvement. Sea of Shadows follows a riveting story of resource exploitation and institutional corruption — where casualties go beyond sea creatures — and the heroic activists and scientists staging an all-out war to save the precious vaquita before it's too late.
